So in class 3 weeks ago we talked about Arrays but how does an OS use these arrays to display our apps and windows on the screens and still have the ability to also have some operations running in the background?